

2ND MARBACHER NECKAR

CLEANUP

United Against Trash & Plastic In Our Environment

“On March 16, 2024, a dedicated team from Fracht Stuttgart joined forces with around 100 volunteers for the second Marbacher NeckarCleanUp, showcasing their commitment to environmental stewardship.

Among the diverse mix of items retrieved from the river were a truck tire, an old license plate, countless glass bottles, undelivered advertising flyers, part of a vase, a single shoe, aluminum rims, garden chairs, and even the spring core of a mattress.

The collective effort resulted in the removal of 900 kilos of waste, significantly cleaning up the Marbacher Neckar area.

For nearly three hours, the Fracht Stuttgart team, alongside other volunteers, worked tirelessly to rid the river's surroundings of plastic and garbage, contributing significantly to the event's success.

This initiative drew support from a wide range of groups and individuals, including local clubs, municipal employees, and other community members, all united by a common goal: to combat pollution and restore the natural habitat for local flora and fauna. The cleanup even attracted the attention of the local Regio-TV station. You can watch the action right HERE.

The drive to clean up the Neckar river highlights a broader issue: the tons of plastic that find their way into water bodies globally each year.

The collective efforts in Marbach not only addressed immediate local environmental concerns but also served as a powerful statement against pollution at large.

The overwhelming positive response and successful outcome have already sparked discussions about organizing another CleanUp event in 2024, further cementing the community's dedication to preserving their natural surroundings.

This event was not just a win for the environment but also a testament to the spirit of collaboration and the significant impact a small group, like the seven members from Fracht Stuttgart, can make when they come together for a greater cause.”
